

Weisberg Lectures—

Warren Commission Author, Critic

Harold Weisberg, noted author of two books blasting the federal investigation of the Kennedy assassination, addressed a large group at Albright Auditorium last night.

Mr. Weisberg spoke with wit, and at length about the alleged inconsistencies in the Warren Report as opposed to the evidence available.

The author, presenting photographic evidence he said was not made available to the commission, stated that Lee Harvey Oswald could have "killed no one" according to the Commission's own evidence.

Although Weisberg called the FBI more competent than their part in the report demonstrated, he criticized the work of that federal agency as well as the Secret Service, the assistant counsels of the Warren Commission, and particularly the poor showing of the Dallas Police Department.

Mr. Weisberg suggested that the commission, even before the start of the investigation, had decided to support a one-man, one-bullet theory. When the evidence did not jibe with that theory, federal agencies and the Dallas police tailored the evidence to fit the Commission's notion of what should have happened. Much evidence was suppressed and other spurious information was introduced into the records of the commission. This, Mr. Weisberg felt, was a shocking lack of integrity on the part of the government.

Weisberg took exception to the one-bullet theory of the assassination. The author carefully traced the path of the one bullet which the government reported finding, and explained why one bullet could not possibly have caused the damage which the commission's report has claimed it did.

Alleging that Lee Harvey Oswald could not have killed John Kennedy, and that there was possibly more than one marksman in Dallas that November day, Weisberg called for a re-opening of the case in a public hearing before the Congress, where all the evidence suppressed by the government might be brought to light.

Mr. Weisberg contended that the government has lied to the people of the United States and the world. The author claimed that his major intention was "The society should start functioning again."

Mr. Weisberg's two books presently published are: "Whitewash: The Report on the Warren Report" and "Whitewash II: The FBI-Secret Service Cover-up". He is now working on a book critical of William Manchester's "Death of a President".
